I am sorry that I have not been able to make an earlier reply in regard to the possibility of your returning to work for this Agency. After our meeting in my office, I asked Mr. Wisner to make a thorough investigation of this whole matter and submit a report to me. He submitted a report on June 21st and I have now had an opportunity to consider it myself. It appears that in the judgment of both Mr. Wisner and [redacted] there is not an available place for you in Europe. They tell me that offers for you to serve here or in the Far East have been made to you and declined. I am reasonably sure that a job in the Training Division would still be open. However, I assume that you have personal reasons for not wishing to work in Washington.

As I told you during the course of our conversation, I do not and in fact could not attempt to select and assign personnel for the various divisions of this Agency. It is obviously a matter for the Assistant Director in charge of the division and for his own personnel staff. Since it seems that the division in which you were employed is not able to offer you a position where you wish to serve, there is nothing that I feel that I can do. However, you may wish to reconsider the offer made to you to serve in the Training Division in Washington.

Very sincerely,

William H. Jackson

[redacted] telephoned saying he had never received letter from DDCI. Told him where letter had been mailed. He has not lived in West Hartford for last two years, but Personnel Division apparently was not advised of any changes of address. Therefore, copy of this letter mailed SPECIAL DELIVERY to [redacted] at [redacted]

William H. Jackson, Esq.,
Deputy Director,
Central Intelligence Agency,
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Bill:

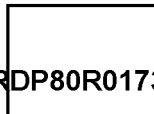

Thanks for the trouble you went to for me on Monday. I hope by now your back is better. I spent Monday afternoon at the Army Historical Section with Dr. H. N. Cole. He does not know officially if General Bolling's observation that the seventy tons of German documents have not been sorted, catalogued and indexed is precise, but he has reason to believe that they are fairly accessible in respect to - a, commands, such as Army Group South and b, dates, e. g. April '41 to December '41. It may be, therefore, that this matter was taken up at too high a level.

If the CIA is interested in having the study I outlined made, it could (but I personally could not) get a better picture of the state of these seventy tons from Mr. Sherrod East (in charge of the A.G. Historical Records, tp. Code 1225). Under him is a Mr. Goldbeck, who is in charge of the German Military Document Section.

As an individual civilian, you will realize that I can do nothing. Further there is in existence the Sinclair-Bissell Agreement, which defines the rights in these documents of the Governments of the United States, United Kingdom and Canada. It does permit in good cases civilians to have access to them and to publish the results of research based on them. But this creates a further obstacle in view of the attitude of the G-2 Section of the Department of the Army.

I shall well understand if you do not think it worth-while to do anything more about this. However, in view of what the Historical Section told me, I think I should at least put it up to you.

Sincerely yours,

R
